Week 3 notes: sampling

The sampling distribution of the mean has standard deviation $\sigma/\sqrt{n}$, called the standard error. Quadrupling the sample size halves the standard error. The central limit theorem says sample means are approximately normal for large n even if the population is skewed. TODO: ask professor whether n=30 is a rule or a rough guide.